

ERIN DURBA

Erin Durba is a Senior Counsel in the Commercial Litigation practice group. Erin has extensive experience litigating complex commercial disputes in federal court and state court and in arbitration and mediation. She has led litigation and trial teams at all stages of the litigation process, from pre-complaint investigations, analysis and client counseling, through discovery, motion practice, trial and appeals. Her experience encompasses a wide range of topics, including contract law, insurance coverage, antitrust, consumer protection, employment and non-compete, partnership disputes, and securities and broker-dealer laws and regulations.

Erin graduated summa cum laude from Loyola College in Maryland in 2001 and received her law degree from Columbia University School of Law in 2005. She spent nine years in the litigation and dispute resolution practice group at a major New York City law firm, where she represented businesses in high-stakes commercial cases. She then spent two years litigating large multidistrict class actions in federal court involving antitrust and consumer protection claims. Erin joined Harrington, Ocko & Monk in 2018.
